

INVENTORY · WASTE · PLATE COSTS

See what your kitchen is really throwing away — in dollars.

The average kitchen wastes 4–10% of everything it buys — and most owners never see the number. OnPar tracks it by ingredient and by reason, tells you what to reorder before you 86 it, and shows the true cost of every plate. It runs on the phone already in your apron.

$14k–$36k

A restaurant buying $30,000/month in food quietly loses that much to waste every year. The first step to winning it back is seeing exactly where it goes — which is the whole point of OnPar.

EVERYTHING YOU NEED, NOTHING YOU DON'T

-  Counts from the walk-in
Tap to adjust stock on any phone. Par levels flag what's low before service does.
-  One-tap purchase orders
Everything below par becomes draft POs, grouped by supplier with suggested quantities. No more Sunday-night texts.
-  Insights that pay for themselves
Run a special on the salmon before it expires. Switch the supplier that quietly raised prices. Each tip carries a dollar figure.

-  Waste, logged in seconds
What, how much, and why — turned into dollars, by ingredient and by reason, benchmarked to the industry.
-  Live plate costs & margins
Every recipe costed from today's prices. See the dish slipping under target before it eats your margin.
-  Up and running in an afternoon
Import your existing spreadsheet in one go. Mount a tablet by the pass for the always-on kitchen display.

~$9,000/yr

Restaurants that start measuring waste typically cut it 30–50%. Recover just a quarter of that, plus halve the hours spent counting and ordering, and a typical independent nets ~$9,000 a year back — against $948/yr for OnPar Starter, or $348/yr at the founding rate. An estimate, not a promise — which is exactly why the first 14 days are free.
